

MC506: LEADING A MISSIONAL CHURCH (4 units)

Mark Hopkins, Assistant Professor of Leadership

DESCRIPTION:

This course explores the identity and purpose of the church as well as the leadership required to lead the church into missional engagement with its context(s). The focus of the course is the intersection of the fields of theology, ecclesiology, missiology, and leadership. The course assists leaders in the development of a missional ecclesiology and a plan to lead their churches into greater redemptive engagement with the world.

LEARNING OUTCOMES: Upon the successful completion of the course, students will have:

- Gained theological perspective on the issues of Trinitarian ecclesiology and leadership
- Gained understanding of ecclesiology and missiology from both historical and contemporary perspectives
- Discerned their own congregation's ecclesial identity and mission paradigm
- Assessed their congregation from the perspective of a holistic missional ecclesiology
- Developed a leadership strategy, including theological, methodological, and behavioral dimensions, for personal and congregational missional renewal

COURSE FORMAT:

The class will be conducted on the Internet using a 10-week lesson program aligned with Fuller's academic calendar. Each week students and the instructor will interact with the course material through journaling, threaded discussions, and web-based research.
