

MR557: WOMEN IN ISLAM (4 units). Evelyne A. Reisacher, Assistant Professor of Islamic Studies:
Online Facilitation by Robin Basselin, Adjunct Instructor in Islamics.

DESCRIPTION:

This course examines the varieties of identities and roles of women in historic and contemporary Islam as evidenced by the Qur'an, the Traditions, the Law, and current writings and experience, and the implications of these for interacting with Muslims. Some of the topics dealt with are the religious and social role and status of Muslim women in various cultures, their place in the family, their participation in Muslim societies, and the current debates about gender issues in Islam. The course will also cover various Christian perspectives on Muslim women. The class will also provide insight for students who are or will be interacting with Muslim women.

LEARNING OUTCOMES:

Upon completion of this course, the students will be able to:

- Know the essential Qur'anic texts dealing with women, as well as some texts of the Hadith and Shariah Law
- Identify the issues that Muslim women face and locate them in historical and cultural contexts
- Be aware of the variety of interpretations concerning the status of Muslim women given by Muslims and Christians
- To reflect missiologically on women's issues in Islam.

COURSE FORMAT:

The class will be conducted on the Internet using a 10-week lesson program aligned with Fuller's academic calendar. Each week students and the instructor will interact with the material provided to the class through video and audio presentations examining historic and contemporary roles of women in Islam. This interaction will be through journaling, threaded discussions, and web-based research.
